

Literature Online: Finding literary criticism

1. Literature Online: finding literary criticism
2. Literature Online is a database focussed solely on literature, as such it is a very good database to use to find literary criticism.
3. To find criticism click on the "Criticism & Reference" link on the left hand side of the Literature Online home screen.
4. Type in your keywords in the search box next to the "Keyword(s)" label. Remember to use Boolean logic AND, OR, and NOT in your search. You can also type in the name of your author in the search box next to where it says "Author/Subject(s)".
5. The next screen shows the results that matched your search terms. You will notice that it lists if there is a citation available, full text, or full text pdf. In some cases the only thing that you are going to find is a citation. This is fine, it just means that you will have to find the full text of the article in another database, or request it through interlibrary loan. To get to the full text of an article that is available, just click on the appropriate full text link.
